FIELD TO WILSON.

Francis Wilson, the popular comedian, he has a notable library and is an redent collector of first editions, ewns who has a notable library and is an ardent collector of first editions, owns a copy of Henry Irving's "Drama," on the fly-leaf of which its author has written this sentence: "In acting, a grain of nature is worth a bushel of artifice." Mr. Wilson's copy of "A little Book of Western Verse," has on an otherwise blank page, some lines signed

When Eugene Field lay dying The death that good men dle Came Francis Wilson flying, As only he can fly.

"My friend, before you peter. And seek the shining shore, Write me, in common meter, Some autographic lore!"

Then Eugene Field smiled sadly, And his eyes grew wan and dim; But he wrote the verses gladly His friend required of him.

And having done this duty, From out its home of clay. That soul of spotless beauty. To Canaan sailed away.
